Richard Leitner/Metroland

Bruce Mackenzie says the curbing installed during repaving of Fifty Road leaves no room for cyclists to evade traffic while the lack of sidewalks is a challenge for pedestrians, particularly when there are snowbanks.

BEING A PEDESTRIAN IN WINONA IS NO WALK IN THE PARK

RICHARD LEITNER
rleitner@hamiltonnews.com

Standing at a crosswalk by the Winona Crossing shopping centre amid the rush of weekday morning traffic, Bruce Mackenzie likened the small patch of sidewalk beneath his feet to an island.

"There's no way to get here from there," he said, pointing northward to the stretch of Fifty Road between the QEW overpass and the corner of South Service Road, which has no sidewalks leading to the signalized crosswalk.

There are no sidewalks to the east or west either, nor are there any bike lanes, including along the recently repaved section of Fifty Road to the south, which he noted does have a section of sidewalk that stops "in the middle of nowhere" before the rail line.
