Giving in all seasons

More than six months after the Christmas rush, a local organization is calling for help to fill its pantry to support those in need

By Joel Wittnebel

Relying on community support can be a fickle thing, especially when that support seems to come and go with the seasons.

At Oshawa's Back Door Mission for the Relief of Poverty, a not-for-profit that provides food, meal-tickets, and support to those in need in the Oshawa area, when the hot weather comes, it tends to dry up more than just the ground outside.

"People kind of associate need with the winter," says Don MacLeod, the president at the Back Door Mission for the past two years.

Located behind the Simcoe Street United Church, the mission serves around 100 people daily during its three days open during the week.

City drifting into
Rocky waters

By Joel Wittebel
The Oshawa Express

They reached out, they spent the money, they pushed the timeline, and now, things have fallen flat.

Following a recent closed meeting report at Oshawa city council, it became known that the recent process to find an operator for a public marina at Oshawa's waterfront has been called off with both of the two proposals that
